

A very unusual George III Mustard Pot made in London in 1791 by John Beldon.

Sold

Description

The Mustard Pot has an unusual broad rectangular form, with incuse corners. The sides are engraved with an upper and lower frieze of ovals and flower heads on a scratch engraved ground. The centre of each side is also decorated with a vacant circular cartouche, surrounded by stylised drapery mantling. The stylised pagoda top, terminates in a stylised urn finial. The reeded scroll handle is attached to the cover with an unusual cast tri-furcated thumb piece. This example is in excellent condition and has a star cut blue glass liner. The base displays a full set of crisp hallmarks and the cover with a sterling mark. A very rare design.
